ABOUT CAPS

Since its establishment in 2013, the mission of the Centre for Asian Philanthropy and Society (CAPS) has been to improve the social investment sector in Asia by identifying and disseminating best practices, models, policies and strategies that can contribute to positive community and systemic change. Through its work, CAPS has become the preeminent thought leader when it comes to private social investment in Asia.

We are a uniquely Asian, independent, action-oriented research and advisory organization committed to improving the quality and quantity of philanthropic giving throughout Asia.

With a strong network and presence across 18 economies, CAPS is well-positioned to understand the key strengths and cultural context of Asia. We work closely with philanthropists and corporate donors to increase the impact of their investments, and our work supports capacity building within the social sector. Our strength is our ability to understand how Asian business leaders and philanthropists think about their efforts to improve their communities, thus assisting them to meet their goals more effectively.

WE DO THIS THROUGH:

POLICY RESEARCH

CAPS' research provides evidence-based findings through primary data collection to support business leaders, philanthropists and policymakers in how they can facilitate and increase private capital flows toward the social sector. Launched in 2018, our biennial Doing Good Index has become a globally cited resource and policy guide for strengthening philanthropic ecosystems in Asia.

APPLIED RESEARCH

CAPS' action-oriented projects provide valuable insights through qualitative and quantitative research to help drive more impactful investment toward meeting social needs. Our research spans topics such as health, environment, education, learning communities, social enterprises, public-private partnerships, impact investing and economy-specific societal challenges.

ADVISORY & COMMISSIONED RESEARCH

CAPS works in an advisory capacity with philanthropists, family offices and foundations to produce bespoke strategies and programmatic plans. Our work leverages CAPS' research and network to help clients develop their approach and program objectives for more impactful outcomes.

CONVENING

CAPS curates invitation-only events for its network of philanthropists and also hosts meetings and workshops to connect partners and foster a learning community. Our conferences bring together distinguished business leaders, philanthropists, topic experts and other stakeholders to share CAPS' latest research and encourage collaboration on philanthropic endeavors.

CHAIR'S MESSAGE

Dear Friends,

We are in the first quarter of 2025 and are witnessing an incredible transformation of the world order as we have known it. While we do not know the end result of these changes, we do know that the rate of this change has been rapid and some of the key indicators reflect an enormous reshuffling of global priorities and influence.

Recent geopolitical developments have considerably altered the state of development finance in Asia. The United States Agency for International Development was a major source of foreign aid to the region, deploying US$1.9 billion in 2024. It seems likely that all of it will cease to be provided. In addition, many European nations have decreased their foreign aid allocations due to changing priorities at home. While these developments took place in 2025, last year, we could already see the impact of aid wariness affecting the sector. According to our Doing Good Index, in 2024, foreign funding accounted for an average of 15% of a social delivery organization's budget, down from 32% in 2020.

What is clear is that now is the time for economies in Asia to both work together as a region and do more with local resources. With more wealth in Asia than ever before, we are in a position to chart our own course. For the past twelve years, CAPS has been working to understand and share philanthropic practices which are making our communities better educated, healthier, with less poverty and more resilience. Throughout our studies and in our convenings, we share the stories, the statistics and the realized potential of private social investment in Asia.

By harnessing the collective strengths of our extensive network of partner organizations, foundations, businesses and individuals across the region, we will continue to discover and celebrate innovative solutions and drive positive systemic change. Thank you, to our many supporters, for your ongoing kindness and generosity. It is my privilege to chair an organization whose dedication to delivering quality research and fostering strategic partnerships contributes toward a brighter future for us all in Asia.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE'S REPORT

Dear Friends,

For many years, there has been talk about the 21st century being the Asian century. Today, we are seeing the realization of that prophecy. While Asian economies continue to grow, with many nations moving into high and middle economic status, we still face a host of social challenges around education, healthcare, poverty alleviation and climate, including the nexus between them. How does Asia translate its economic success into widespread community well-being?

Due to Asia's continued success and the geopolitical storms of the day, foreign aid is decreasing in the region. This is the time for Asia to come together as a region and for individual nations to harness the vitality, innovation and motivation of their citizenry to develop solutions.

CAPS has had the extraordinary privilege of having a front row seat to the promise, potential and actualization of how people and communities in Asia help one another. Through our studies, advisory and convenings, we see how philanthropists and business leaders utilize the resources at their disposal to improve their communities and countries. We see remarkable social entrepreneurs and non-profit leaders whose tireless work uplifts their beneficiaries. And we see partnerships between donors, with governments and with social delivery organizations bear important and sustainable outcomes.

In 2024, we released the 4th iteration of the Doing Good Index which provides a comprehensive analysis of the factors which enable and/or impede the giving and receiving of private social investment. Over the past year, several governments have sought our input on policies and incentives to stimulate more local donations. Unpacking the policy implications of our study, we examined how government procurement practices can support the social sector.

We also carried out studies on early childhood education in Thailand and published a DECODED analysis showing the unique characteristics of collaborative funding efforts in Asia. Our sister organization, the Centre for Asian Philanthropy India (CAPI), published a ground-breaking study on how philanthropists are addressing mental health challenges in that country.

Our work continues to show that while there is great respect for global practices, the unique models and strategies of private social investment in Asia are now more important than ever. We look forward to continuing to identify, document and share Asian practices of helping each other and our communities.

With great appreciation for all supporters, partners and colleagues embarked in the effort of making the world better, I remain optimistic despite the trying times.

Doing Good Index™ 2024

In 2024, CAPS released the fourth edition of our flagship policy report, the Doing Good Index, an evidence-based study of the factors that enable or impede the flow of private capital to meet social needs.

MICROSITE

The Doing Good Index comprises four sub-indexes: Regulations, Tax and Fiscal Policy, Ecosystem and Procurement. These sub-indexes help to illustrate specific measures that economies have taken to catalyze philanthropic giving and promote the development of the social sector.

In an age of rapid technological advancements across the globe, this iteration of the Doing Good Index also includes a section on how social sector organizations across Asia are leveraging digital technologies in their daily operations, fundraising efforts, outreach strategies and service delivery.

The Doing Good Index offers data-driven insights toward developing concrete solutions for impactful systemic change. It not only offers a pulse check of the social sector in 17 Asian economies, but also identifies what policies and practices can help enhance private giving toward effectively addressing urgent social and environmental needs.

Procurement for Good: Government Procurement from the Social Sector in Asia

Government procurement of goods and services from the social sector can be mutually beneficial. However, the potential benefits are contingent on the ease and accessibility of government procurement and broader factors contributing to a social delivery organization's capacity to fulfill needs. Our report, published in May 2024, provides an assessment of the policy landscape of government procurement from the social sector in Asia.

The report draws insights from 23 individuals as well as the 2,183 non-profits and social enterprises that participated in the Doing Good Index 2024 Survey. The findings identified obstacles that limit the potential benefits of government procurement from the social sector and introduced recommendations for governments and social delivery organizations to address specific issues.

Evolving Corporate Social Responsibility Trends in Taiwan

Released in September 2024, this report was developed in collaboration with Taiwan's leading media outlet, CommonWealth Magazine, and investigates corporate social responsibility (CSR) trends and practices in Taiwan. Drawing on 17 years of longitudinal data, the report reveals how Taiwanese companies are embedding CSR into their business strategies, consistently exceeding regulatory requirements, prioritizing environmental sustainability and contributing to broader global sustainability goals.

As Taiwan's CSR landscape continues to evolve, it is poised to drive innovations and practices. Its forward-thinking approach and successful policies offer a blueprint for balancing economic growth with environmental and social stewardship, providing a model for sustainable development across the region.

DECODED: Collaborative Giving in Asia

Our DECODED series unpacks, explains and crystallizes issues critical for social investment in Asia. It draws upon our expertize in research and access to an extensive network of sector experts and philanthropists in 18 Asian economies, enabling us to identify emerging trends in the region. Through DECODED, we translate these concepts into digestible insights.

In October 2024, we launched DECODED: Collaborative Giving in Asia. Given the complexities of the challenges we face, collaboration among donors, with social delivery organizations and with government is critical to drive meaningful change. In Asia, we find that while interest in collaboration is high, actual collaborative efforts are more limited. This report shares what drives collaboration in Asia and what facets need to be in place to make these efforts both impactful and sustainable.

COMMISSIONED RESEARCH

CAPS continues to work in an advisory capacity with philanthropists, family offices, foundations, social sector organizations and governments to develop bespoke strategies and programmatic plans. We understand what works within the Asian context, who to partner with, and what governance models are most suited to meaningful outcomes. Our work leverages CAPS' research and network to help clients drive change, nurture important relationships and maximize the impact of their social investments. In the past year, our commissioned research has included:

Nurturing Minds: Early Childhood Education in Thailand

In March 2024, supported by Bangkok Bank, CAPS published a study that delves into the early childhood education (ECE) landscape in Thailand, providing a comprehensive analysis based on extensive research and insights from various stakeholders. The ECE landscape is complex, with many interdependent components. The success of ECE relies on access, infrastructure, program quality, staffing, resources and cultural nuances. Through the examination of a selection of 12 ECE initiatives by local NGOs, community organizations, and government-backed programs, the report unpacks these intricate dynamics and suggests philanthropic contributions that can amplify impact and shape young learners' outcomes.

ASEAN BAC – Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Research

The ASEAN Business Advisory Council Malaysia commissioned a report on CSR in ASEAN. The study provides insights into the state of CSR in Southeast Asia and offers evidence-based recommendations for the ASEAN Secretariat, individual governments, companies and other stakeholders to undertake to increase the quality and quantity of corporate philanthropy in the region. The report will be launched officially later in 2025 during an ASEAN conference.

Other commissioned work includes:

- The role of philanthropy in inclusive development
- The social enterprise landscape in Asia

CONVENING

CAPS regularly hosts invitation-only conferences, events and workshops for philanthropists, family offices, experts and business leaders. Our convenings provide unique opportunities for our community to share ideas, knowledge and strategies for improving the social investment sector.

Doing Good Index™ 2024

Together with our Doing Good Index partners, we held 17 events in 12 economies to disseminate the Doing Good Index 2024. These ranged from large in-person events to online and hybrid sessions and closed-door discussions with government officials. Over 1,400 individuals participated in these events across the region, with more than 600 attending in person.

CSR, ESG and Sustainability Practices Workshop

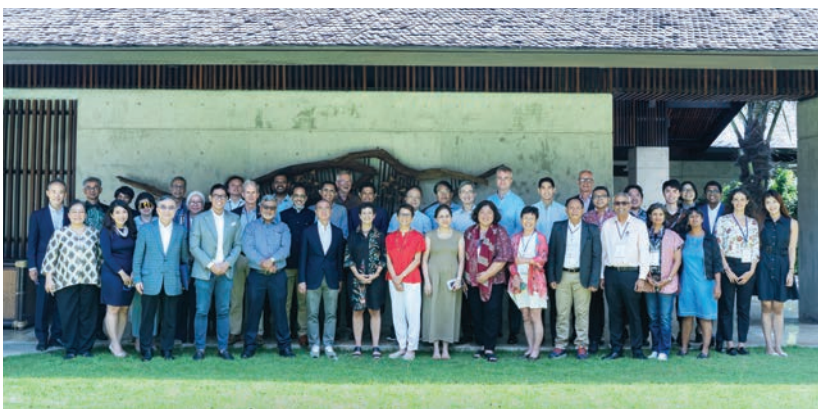
In partnership with Fubon Financial Holding Co. Ltd., we organized a workshop for senior executives in April 2024 on strategies for successfully integrating CSR, ESG and sustainability practices within the organization. We also co-hosted an interactive seminar with Taipei Fubon Bank to present findings from our report, The Tao of Giving: Insights into Ultra-High-Net-Worth Giving in Greater China to their private wealth clients.

Asian Impact Network Conference

In May 2024, CAPS hosted the inaugural Asian Impact Network Conference in Hong Kong, bringing together corporate leaders from across the region. The event was designed to address the evolving role of corporates as responsible businesses and explore the intersection of CSR, philanthropy and sustainability. Delegates had the opportunity to delve into challenges faced by the Asian private sector and explore innovative solutions to meet changing societal expectations and become true community leaders in their respective industries.

Addressing Climate Change – The Voice of Emerging Asia

In September 2024, CAPS hosted a thought leadership workshop in Bali with knowledge partner McKinsey & Company. This provided a platform for in-depth conversations on how to leverage Asia's unique strengths, resources and characteristics to address climate change. The event gathered a distinguished group of climate change experts and corporate leaders to amplify the voices, ideas and solutions from emerging markets in Asia and incorporate them as part of the wider global discourse.



CAPS Philanthropy Conference

In November 2024, CAPS co-organized our annual philanthropy conference with the Chaudhary Foundation in Kathmandu, Nepal. Guided by an enriching three-day program, the conference provided a dynamic platform for guests to share their diverse insights and unique philanthropic journeys. The program addressed pertinent topics including the latest Asian philanthropy trends, how to build a legacy through integrated philanthropy, the importance of meeting emerging educational needs, and opportunities and challenges in the international carbon market.

'DOING WELL': CAPS credited Taiwan's 'mature' social sector in driving civic groups to direct private investment toward pressing social issues

Staff writer, with CNA

Taiwan maintained its top ranking among 17 Asian economies for social sector charitable giving in this year's Doing Good Index, with events planned in Taipei tomorrow to showcase the results and honor the best-performing civic groups, the Ministry of the Interior said.

Taiwan and Singapore maintained their ranking of "doing well" in the index, which has been published by the Hong Kong-based Centre for Asian Philanthropy and Society (CAPS) every two years since 2018, the ministry said in a statement on Saturday.

It would hold an awards ceremony tomorrow to honor civic groups for their public charity work and the best-performing professional associations this year, including the Taiwan People's Food Bank Association and the Taiwan Bar Association, it said.

2025: THE YEAR AHEAD

We remain committed to inspiring and empowering individuals and organizations to dedicate resources to addressing the region's most pressing social and environmental challenges.

We will continue to expand our research, partnerships and organizational structure in 2025. In addition to starting the data-gathering process for the Doing Good Index 2026, we will release studies on elderly care, maternal and child health and Asian perspectives and practices on family philanthropy.

As private wealth owners increasingly seek to align their financial objectives with social impact and family legacy, there is a critical need for family office professionals to deepen their expertise in private social investments such as philanthropy and impact investing. To meet this demand, CAPS will craft a five-part family office masterclass series in 2025. Through structured, in-depth conversations with subject matter experts and practitioners active in Asia's private social investment space, participants will gain vital insights into private social investment strategies, emerging trends and operational frameworks from across Asia.

To continue the development and expansion of our Impact Network, we will gather senior corporate foundation leaders from across the region for our annual conference in Manila. The focus in 2025 will be on unpacking the different dimensions of impact, including reputational impact, project impact, shared value and impact measurement. We look forward to facilitating a dynamic platform of exchange and learning.

As we expand our reach across the region, we are also completing the set-up of our representative office in Shanghai to further our engagement and research in mainland China.
